MANUSCRIPTS SUBMITTED, IN PREPARATION, OR UNPUBLISHED (^Ppostdoctoral fellow, ^Ggraduate advisee, ^Uundergraduate advisee under my supervision during data collection / manuscript preparation)

Kotelnikova^P, Y., Ruggero, C. J., Kotov, R., Fu, J. M., Shelton, A., Watson, D., & Clark, L. A. (Under invited revision). Cross-cultural robustness of the tripartite model of depression and anxiety: Adaptation and testing for Russian-language culture. Assessment.

The data for this project were collected by Kotov under my supervision when he was a graduate student. Long story short, the paper was submitted and received an R&R decision, but it then languished until it was picked up by my now-former postdoc who is responding to the editor's and reviewers' comments and preparing it for re-submission.

Levin-Aspenson, H. F., Watson, D., Clark, L. A., & Smith, D. (under revision). Exploratory bifactor analysis of psychopathology symptoms and traits.

*Vittengl, J. R., Jarrett, R. B., Ro, E., & Clark, L. A. (completed manuscript under internal review). How can the Alternative DSM-5 Model of Personality Disorders advance understanding and treatment of depression? Slated for Journal of Affective Disorders.

*Papers that are products of a collaboration that has been ongoing for nearly 30 years. The data were collected for one or more randomized clinical trials funded by an NIMH grant to Jarrett and Thase. Vittengl is my former graduate student and he, Jarrett, and I meet virtually on a weekly basis to develop the conceptualization and data-analytic approach for the various manuscripts we have written together. Vittengl usually takes primary charge of the data analysis and initial writing, whereas both Jarrett and I are active in shaping both the ideas and written product and in shepherding it through to publication; Thase contributes in this way also.

Watson, D., & Clark, L. A. (Under invited revision). Comorbidity and heterogeneity: Two challenges for personality pathology research. Invited paper for a Special Issue of Personality Disorder: Theory, Research, & Treatment.

Ongoing projects—active

Corona-Espinosa^G, A., Berghuis, H., Shapiro, J.^{FG}, Livesley, W. J., & Clark, L. A. (in preparation). A short form of the General Assessment of Personality Dysfunction: Psychometric properties and evidence of construct validity.

Draft completed and under review by co-authors. This and the next paper are, respectively, the first-year project and M.A. thesis of my graduate student, A. Corona-Espinosa. The original measure is W. J. Livesley's and this work is being done with his and the copyright holder's permission. H. Berghuis contributed data and J. Shapiro, another (now former) graduate student of mine, has contributed to conceptualizing the work and editing the papers.

Corona-Espinosa^G, A., Berghuis, H., Shapiro, J.^{FG}, Livesley, W. J., & Clark, L. A. (analyses ongoing). A comparison of the construct validity of personality functioning measures developed before and after publication of the DSM-5 Alternative Model of Personality Disorder.

Data collection and analyses completed, writing well underway See comment on paper above.
